arrive at Weehawken at 8:05 A. M. ran into a misplaced switch yesterday morning and struck the rear of a gravel train which stood on the siding. Two Italian laborers, Joseph Allau and Joseph Dinaro, were killed and seven persons were hurt.

The accident occurred a half mile from the station, just after the passenger train had emerged from the tunnel. The work train had run onto the siding only five minutes before. John Weidman, the switchman at that point, forgot about the Haverstraw local and left the switch open. There were no danger signals set and Engineer Madden kept on. When he ran onto the siding lies set his brakes, but his engine hit the canoose and telescoped it on the flatear ahead. On this car were all the men who were killed and injured.

The passengers on the local were shaken up and a few were slightly bruised. Weidman, who has been employed for seven years at that very switch without a complaint against him, admitted to Supt. J. H. Hustin of the West Shore road that he forgot to throw the switch back until it was too late. He was dismissed. Last right the police were looking for him but he could not be found. All of the injured are expected to recover.
